Organization	FIDMAG Research Foundation	Web	https://fidmag.org/en/
Organization Type	Non-profit making private research foundation
Research field	Health Sciences - Neurosciences
Brief description of the institution	FIDMAG Research Foundation works to improve the understanding and the treatment of major mental illnesses through basic and clinical research, with the aim of enhancing prevention, recovery and treatment. FIDMAG's main interest is in the field of psychosis, with particular expertise in the area of neuroimaging and genetics.
Brief description of the Group	FIDMAG consists of a core team of 20 individuals dedicated exclusively to research, who work in collaboration with a broader group of psychiatrists, clinical psychologists and health professionals in the Fundació Hospitalarias network of hospitals in Spain. We also maintain collaborations with other institutions and universities, both nationally and internationally.
Brief description of the Project	The focus of our work is the investigation of severe mental disorders, including but not limited to schizophrenia and bipolar disorder. We study structural and functional imaging changes in these disorders, and the relationship of such changes to symptoms and cognition. For this we employ a range of state-of-the-art structural and functional imaging methodologies and techniques. We also have interests in neuropsychology and genetics in relation to structural and functional imaging changes, and carry out clinical trials.
